A round-the-world trip

When I was 16, my parents decided to take me and my brother Luke, out of school for six months, to travel around the world. They wanted us to visit lots of different countries and have new experiences. We both had to continue with our studies during the trip, so nearly every day we had online classes in subjects like Maths and Science.

We did some fantastic things on the trip, like sailing along the Mekong River in Vietnam and visiting the Taj Mahal in India. Luke enjoyed travelling around the Amboseli National Park in Kenya. He was interested in wildlife and loved seeing the elephants.

Everyone asks if I missed things while I was away – like my favourite food or having my own room – but I tell them not really. It was an adventure and I enjoyed everything about it.
